The City of Leander,

originally called Bagdad, saw its first settlers arrive in the area around 1845, who received bounty land grants in exchange for service in the Texas Revolution.

By the 1880's many changes were on the way. The railroad industry expanded to Texas with plans to build tracks through Bagdad's downtown area. The citizens opposed the railroad and the Austin & Northwestern Railroad officials decided instead to build the tracks one mile east of town. Soon after the railroad was completed the townspeople realized they had made a mistake and it could be of great benefit to their businesses to be located near the railroad.

The original Bagdad settlers started moving their businesses and homes nearer to the railroad tracks. The area was surveyed, lots were sold by the railroad and the new town of Leander was established in 1882.
