Located in Collin and Denton counties just north of Dallas, is one of the fastest-growing cities in the Dallas-Fort Worth metroplex. Originally settled in the late 1870s and officially founded in 1879, the community shifted to its present location in 1902 when the railroad arrived, sparking new growth and establishing the foundation of today's thriving city. Known for its preserved historic downtown, strong agricultural roots, and welcoming small-town character, Celina has rapidly expanded in recent years, with population estimates reaching over 54,000 in 2025 and continuing to climb. Despite this remarkable growth, Celina continues to celebrate its heritage through community events, local markets, and a focus on maintaining its unique blend of tradition and modern opportunity.
