Springtown is a small-town gem just 27 miles northwest of Fort Worth – close to the city, but worlds away in feel. First settled in 1856 and incorporated in 1884, it carries deep historical roots under a name its own residents chose. Today, that same community-first spirit shapes everyday life, from a well-loved 33-acre park with sports fields, disc golf, and a walking trail winding past a genuine dinosaur track site, to a library system that reaches across the county. It's a place where neighbors still know each other and Fort Worth is an easy drive – the best of both worlds, no compromise required.
