Community

Lockhart is a gem of a small city, conveniently located 25 miles southeast of Austin, 48 miles northeast of San Antonio, and just 15 miles east of San Marcos. Lockhart's 13,487 residents enjoy the best of both worlds – easy access to all the big city amenities and attractions, and a welcoming, small town free from the stresses of big city life. Lockhart's great schools, low crime, lack of traffic congestion, and excellent fire, police, and EMS protection make it an ideal home for families. Lockhart is a diverse, inclusive city with a rich history. It was a boomtown at the turn of the last century, a wild west driven by cotton and cattle, trains and trail drives. It's now home to a vibrant creative community and host to many local festivals.

The Barbecue Capital of Texas

Lockhart's many BBQ restaurants estimate that about 5,000 people visit their establishments each week. This would be roughly 250,000 people a year who eat BBQ in Lockhart. In fact, the Texas Legislature passed a resolution in 2003 proclaiming Lockhart to be The Barbecue Capital of Texas. Here's the current rundown of BBQ royalty in Lockhart:

Blacks Barbeque

215 N. Main | blacksbbq.com

Internationally known and was established in 1932. It is one of the oldest barbecue restaurants in Texas that has been continuously owned and operated by the same family. Black's has been recognized in various publications such as the New York Times and Texas Monthly magazine.

During President Lyndon Johnson's term in the 1960's, the President asked Black's BBQ to provide barbecue sausage to be served on the grounds of the U.S. Capitol in front of the Smithsonian Institute. With Secret Service and Department of the Agriculture personnel supervising the operations, the sausage was prepared and flown directly to Washington, D.C. for this Presidential affair.

Chisholm Trail Barbeque

1323 S. Colorado | lockhartchisholmtrailbbq.com

Chisholm Trail Barbeque is a young upstart as things go in the Lockhart barbecue business. The restaurant was opened in 1978 by Floyd Wilhelm who sold his fishing boat to raise enough money to open a restaurant. According to Wilhelm, 'sometimes I look back and think I must have been crazy. Starting a barbecue place here was like putting a ballpark across from Yankee Stadium.'

Thumper's BBQ

1130 S Colorado St | facebook.com/thumperworks

Thumpers is a relative newcomer to the BBQ showdown in Lockhart, and is one of the town's first food trucks. Offerings include the usuals, plus pulled pork, brisket tacos and wraps.

Kreuz Barbeque

619 North Colorado Street | kreuzmarket.com

Kreuz Market (pronounced 'Krites') might be the most unique dining experience you've ever had. The beef, sausage or pork is served on brown butcher paper. No side dishes here. But you can enjoy a slice of cheddar cheese, chunk of onion, fresh tomatoes, avocado and your favorite beverage. Don't ask for barbecue sauce. They don't have it and quite honestly are offended if anyone asks. The owners say, 'good barbecue doesn't need sauce.'

Smitty's Market

208 S Commerce Street | smittysmarket.com

Smitty's Market opened the doors at the former Kreuz Market location on South Commerce Street in October 1999. The story of how Smitty's came to be is somewhat of a local legend so let's just say that in Lockhart, barbecuing runs along family lines. Nina and Jim Sells, along with Nina's sons, John and James, followed in the footsteps of Nina's dad, Edgar "Smitty" Schmidt and are serving up great barbecue, sausage and pork chops from the same location that has been in the Schmidt family for over 50 years.
