

Westlake

Austin, Texas

Located in west Travis County, Westlake is an upscale suburban community. Situated on the southwest side of Austin, on the edge of the Balcones Fault and the start of the Texas Hill Country, it began its rapid development in the late 1970s and 80s. Development was spurred into the hill country by the construction of the south section of Loop 360 from US 290 to RM 2244, which opened on February 11, 1970.

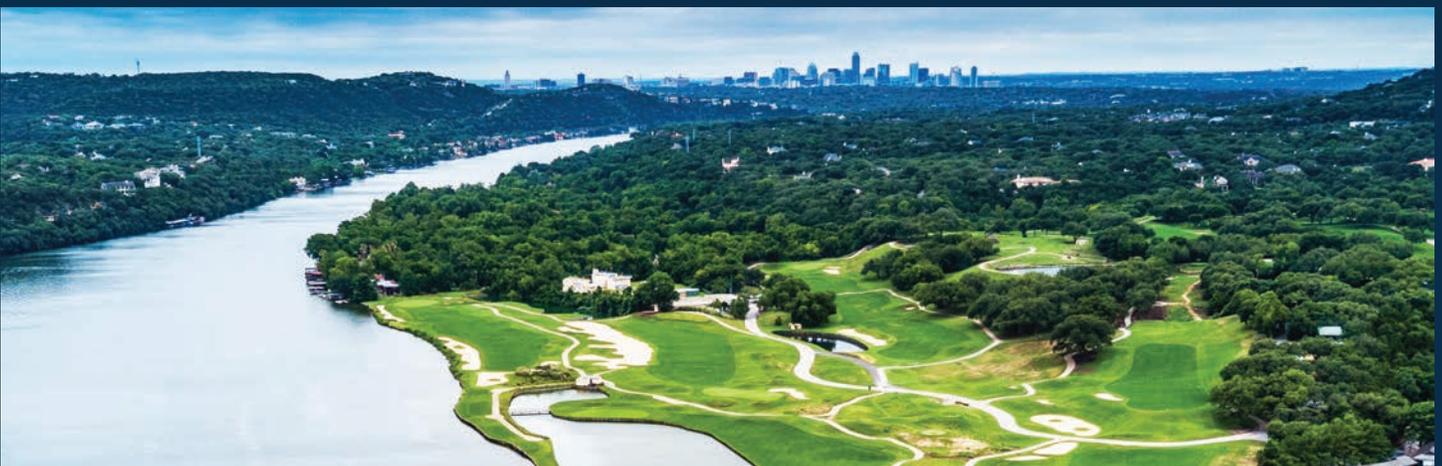

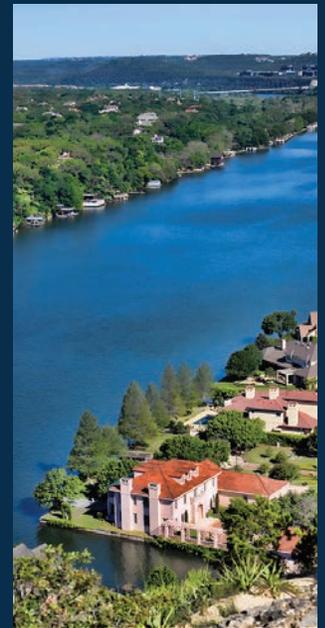

Once the highway opened, communities surrounding Barton Creek, including Lost Creek developed by Dick Rathgabler, expanded rapidly. It was not until the last section of roadway for Loop 360, between RM 2244 and FM 2222, opened in the early 80s that we began to see development tracts starting with Davenport Ranch and the new home for the Austin Country Club and Golf Course. At that time, many luxury homes were built in the hills on the south side of the Colorado River.

Lake Austin

Formed in 1949 when LCRA constructed the Tom Miller Dam, Lake Austin is one of Texas' seven Highland Lakes. Since then, it has served not only as flood control, but also as a recreation spot for locals.

The waters are popular for fishers for the abundance of largemouth bass. Catfish and sunfish can be caught as well. The health of the lake has been drastically improved by the introduction of Asian Grass Carp. Some of the Highland lakes suffer from the presence of Hydrilla, a non-native aquatic plant. As of 2014, however, the Hydrilla has been completely eliminated thanks to carp's appetite.

Lake Austin is also a prime boating destination. Pontoon and ski boats can be rented, as well as kayaks, canoes and wakeboards. Boaters benefit from the consistency of the water level, which can be adjusted via the dam.

The Westlake Community Performing Arts Center is a multipurpose performance venue that serves as a rental house, as well as a place for students of Westlake High School to perform.

Eanes Independent School District

The school district started in a small building over a hundred years ago, serving the primary grades. Eanes School, operating on the same site since 1874, is one of the oldest continuously run schools in the state of Texas. It was not until the early 70's that Eanes ISD added middle and upper school classes to meet the needs of the rapidly growing population. West Lake Hills students are served by the highly recognized Eanes Independent School District, which presently enrolls around 7,100 students, distributed among nine schools. The most prestigious school in the district is Westlake High School, a US Blue Ribbon School, and winner of the Texas Successful Schools Award for Outstanding Performance. Westlake High School is well known for its academics, ranking 72nd in Newsweek Magazine's list of the nation's top schools in 2006.
